An appropriate right is required for use of water on nonriparian land and for storage of water. Generally, appropriate rights may be exercised only when there is a surplus not needed by riparian water users. Since 1914 new appropriators have been required to obtain a permit and license from the State.

A riparian right enables an owner of land bordering a natural lake or stream to take and use water on their riparian land or to divert water which originates in a different watershed, or return flows from use of groundwater.

or to divert the natural flow of a stream but may not be used to store water for later use other riparian users. Riparian rights may be used to divert the natural flow of a stream but may not be used to store water with other riparian users. Riparian rights may be used to divert the natural flow to the served parcel. Generally, a riparian water user must share the water supply with parcels without reservation of the riparian right to the served parcel.
